Dr. Breckinridge's paper on the State of the Country came up in the afternoon, before a densely crowded Hail. The first effort was by Judge Gamble of St. Louis, to quash it, by a substitute, which after some sirimithing was opposed by Dr. B. He pointed out, in strong terms, the equivocal position of all the Border-State clergymen, and asserted, that under the presence of injury to the cause of loyalty and truth, so ploudy scalored, it is the harm to the cause of Socosion that was feared by any such deliverance as that proposed. He knew of but one loyal clergyman of our Church in the Symod of Missouri. None in Kentucky, and none in Maryland. This statement the Rev. Dr. McPheseters of St. Louis fully proved, by attempting to deay it. The Rev. Mr. McKee, of the Presbytery of Louisville, made an earnest roply, basing his argument upon the necessity of obedience to the "powers that be," or series of Mr. Rarey's horse-taming exhibitions was given last night in the Cooper Institute before a very large and highly respectable assemblage. The first ani nal introduced by the lecturer (for such in reality is Mr. Rarey), for the illustration of his subject wa a young unbroken sorrel colt. In manipulating which Mr. Rarey explained in clear and simple of language the great fundamental principle underlying his system, viz.: the law of kindness. By pursuing Yearly Meeting reassembled at about 10 instance in any of the technology for the lead recognitions of a contents of a content of a contents of a content of a con and gentle handling to convince him that there is nothing to be apprehended from such subjection, be shows you the real secret of his success. His first experiment was decidedly successful, although in consequence of its freedom from actual vice, there was not that spice of excitement felt among the audience which prevailed during the lesson of the second horse experimented upon. This was a gray horse belonging to the Central Park Commissioners, of a very savage and malicious disposition, which would hardly permit any person to approach him. Indeed, during the short time he had been in the building he had already lamed one man in attendance upon him. Under Mr. Rarey's hands, however, although at first very ferocious, kicking violently and leaving the impressions of his heels on the walls, he soon became quiet and kind, allowing his instructor to play with his legs, mount and ride him around without showing any symptoms of his former temper. His third and last subject was a dark and very handsome sorrel horse, whose owner wished him to be cured of his sensitive percusness, without being subjected to the throwing-down process. This Mr. Rarey effectually did, the horse allowing a drum to be played upon his back without
